

This morning's email briefing will serve as a broad weather outlook for the greater San Francisco Bay Area for this weekend and through next week. There will be daily updates through Feb 9th. Additional forecast briefings will be disseminated based on partner request and/or weather demands.

Impacts Summary

- Cold Temperatures - Much colder nighttime lows will arrive for Sunday night and Monday night. This will bring nighttime lows dipping near freezing in outlying areas and mid-upper 30s in the San Jose area and in the low-mid 40s in San Francisco. Temperatures this cold could cause problems for vulnerable populations and sensitive vegetation in and around San Jose and the Santa Clara Valley.

Weather Summary

A series of weak and mainly dry cold fronts will cross the area this weekend. A few sprinkles are possible this morning and a few showers tonight and Sunday but the majority of the area will remain dry. A storm will move into Southern California late this weekend but be too far south to impact the Bay Area. Sunday night and Monday night, colder temperatures are expected with nighttime lows dipping near freezing in outlying areas through Tuesday. Extended range models remain generally dry for the coming week. There may be some showers again late Tuesday but there is some uncertainty in the forecast at this time.
